Mrs White was a very good gardener. She had a beautiful garden in front of her house. It was the best garden in her street because she watered the flowers every day and looked after them carefully. But of all the flowers in her garden she loved roses best. This story happened on a hot summer day. Mrs White was at home. She was having a cup of tea in her living-room. Suddenly somebody knocked on the door. When she opened the door, she could see a small boy of nine or ten years old with a lot of roses in his hands. The flowers were red, pink, yellow and white and looked very nice.

"Hello", said the boy and smiled cheerfully.

"Hello", answered Mrs White and looked at the boy in surprise.

"I am selling roses. Would you like any, madam?" asked the boy and pointed to the flowers in his hands.

"No, thank you, dear," said Mrs White and turned to go away. But the boy continued.

"They are quite cheap, madam, I will give you the bunch for fifty pence."

"No," said Mrs White and then added: "I never buy flowers."

The boy didn't go away but said again, "They are very fresh and beautiful and they smell good."

Mrs White got bored with the boy and said, "Dear, I have my own roses in my own garden, and every time I want fresh flowers, I can cut them in the garden without any money."

"No", said the boy. "You don't have roses in your garden any more. I have cut them all this morning."
